BACKGROUND AND OBJECTIVE

Background

In its recommendations for the protection of people living in long term contaminated areas, the International Commission on Radiological Protection (ICRP) emphasizes the importance of directly involving the affected population and local professionals in the rehabilitation of living conditions. Authorities and experts creating conditions and providing means for empowerment of the population is key to this involvement.

In this context ICRP, together with Radiation Safety Forum Japan, began the ICRP Fukushima Dialogue Initiative in November 2011 to transfer experience from communities effected by Chernobyl, facilitate discussions between stakeholders, and deeply understand the challenges in order to improve future ICRP recommendations. This initiative has brought together: local residents and professionals; representatives of villages, towns, the prefecture, national agencies, NGOs, and other Japanese organisations; representatives of Belarusian, Norwegian, and French organisations with direct experience in managing long term consequences of the Chernobyl accident; and, representatives of international agencies. Together, they find ways to respond to the challenges of the long term rehabilitation of living conditions in areas affected by the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant accident.

Objective of this Workshop

The objective of this Workshop is to share the experiences and main lessons of the ICRP Fukushima Dialogue Initiative, focusing on the twelve main dialogue meetings held between November 2011 and September 2015 at various locations in Fukushima Prefecture.
